Bringing Canning Back

The Cannery adds authentic flavor to pub fare BY CAROLINA REID

Settled where The Bier Stein used to pour pints for locals lies The Cannery, a hip but homey restaurant where owner Mike Wares is “trying to put an honest culinary effort behind pub fare.” The restaurant has 20 beers on tap, a full bar and a menu that boasts homemade food with a true Northwest feel.

The Parmesan Crusted Reuben, which won Wares the title of King of Battledish (an October Dish Crawl competition between six local restaurants), is the best seller. But other combinations, like the kale Caesar salad, deep-fried pickles and spinach and goat cheese lasagna, introduce foodies to clever, unique flavors they might not expect.

Even The Cannery’s mayonnaise, fry sauce, salad dressings and soups are made in-house. Wares, who has been growing food for years, is currently in the process of getting licensing to can in house. He could use a co-packer to produce sellable cans off-site, but he says this would be contradictory to the homemade style of his restaurant.

TOP: BURGER, FRIES & BREW

BOTTOM: KALE CAESAR SALAD

“We eat what we can and can what we can,” he says. Starting in the next few months, Wares is hoping his restaurant won’t just display the colorful veggie-packed jars on the walls as decoration but will send them out the door with customers.

Canning is an old-school method of food preservation that, as Wares sees it, is usually “talked about in the hallways of churches amongst the older ladies.” But he and his restaurant are here to bring it back.

If you ask Wares, he can talk your ear off about the quality of The Cannery’s Diner Burger thanks to Oregon Valley Natural Beef — not in a Portlandia way, but in a way that proves he knows what he’s doing with flavor profiling. He studied at Le Cordon Bleu in Portland and is the man in the kitchen every weekday.

The house drinks are special too. The Bucha-cha, a tangy vodka-kombucha blend created by mixologist Morgan Pharis, won second in the Battledish competition, and the bloody mary causes a change of heart for drinkers who usually can’t stand the savory spice.

Wares opened the restaurant last April with his spouse, Laurie, whom he says does a lot of the behind-the-scenes work. The space only needed a minor facelift to expand the bar and revamp the kitchen, which is now separated by delicate, vintage windows taken from an old house. Upcycled wood pallet tables add to the authentic feel. The vibe is casual and honest, and the artwork brings the essence of the outdoors inside.

Customers can score a basket of fries in exchange for a “Like” on Facebook and can enter a weekly drawing to win a free entrée, salad or sandwich. Every night features a different deal and every Wednesday, The Cannery welcomes local musician Jeremy Clark Pruitt. Saturday open mics attract a more acoustic crowd, and on weekends, the restaurant opens at 10 am for brunch until 2 pm.

The Cannery is located at 345 E. 11th Ave., 345-5435, theeugenecannery.com. Hours are 11:30 am to 10 pm Monday through Thursday, 11:30 am to midnight Friday, 10 am to midnight Saturday and 10 am to 10 pm Sunday.

Home Is WHERE THE Food Is

Eating locally year-round can be intimidating, even to people who are adventurous cooks. Though we have an abundance of farms and produce here in the Northwest, sometimes it can be hard to know what to eat in February when the potatoes have run out. Author Elin England is trying to make that easier. Her first book, Eating Close to Home, is a seasonal guide to what's available in the Pacific Northwest and what to do with it. Her newest book, Further Adventures in Eating Close to Home, covers beans, grains, nuts and seeds.

"The first book I started writing in 2004," England recalls. "It was back when people were just starting to become interested in local eating and they hadn't even coined the phrase 'locavore' yet." At that time, the Willamette Farm and Food Coalition was studying if it would be possible for our region to feed itself with only local food, and England's husband, Don Schneider, was helping with that research. "The answer was yes, we could feed ourselves year-round, but people would have to give up cooking zucchini 12 months of the year," she says. "I said somebody would have to write a cookbook and Don said, 'Yeah, somebody should!'"

England took on the cookbook project as a personal challenge, and she envisioned it as a gift to the community. Many local people contributed their personal recipes, and a portion of the proceeds of each book support the Willamette Farm and Food Coalition, which facilitates and supports the development of a secure and sustainable food system in Lane County.

A few years ago, WFFC received a rural business enterprise grant from the Oregon Department of Agriculture. The grant was to promote farms that were growing beans and grains. WFFC executive director Lynn Fessenden says that in 2010 she and her staff hosted a farmers market booth where they sold products from area farms that were experimenting with growing beans, grains, nuts and seeds.

Local beans and grains feed you all year round BY VANESSA SALVIA

"We were constantly being asked for recipes," Fessenden says. "The farmers were waking up the community that these products were here." Fessenden says there are four local farms that are growing large amounts of beans and grains and several smaller farms that are experimenting with heirloom beans and grains for flours.

England realized that farmers were growing these products that consumers could store all year round and wanted to help create a market for them. "Farmers are growing them but we need to have people buying them," England says. "I was interested in writing the second book because that was the gap. It wasn't part of the conversation yet, but in the interim since the last book a lot of the grass growers were finding that people didn't want to plant lawns quite so much so they experimented with growing different things."

Further Adventures provides 133 simple, family-friendly recipes. She also packs in contact information for farms and regional suppliers. Within each topic England includes appetizers, main dishes, salads and soups and, in the case of the grains chapter, breakfast dishes. Her son, Kory, and her husband have been the prime taste testers for these dishes. "Kory has probably eaten more beans and grains this year than any teenager in America!" England jokes. "They've been good sports about it."

That's not hard to imagine. England began learning to speak Italian during the development of this book, so many traditional Italian recipes made their way in. Recipes such as "Ceci Fritta" (fried garbanzo bean fritters), or "Polenta Pasticciata Di Mama Elin" ("Baked Polenta in the Style of Mama Elin") are not only easy but also delicious. Because heirloom beans and grains are eaten the world over, many of her recipes have an international flavor. A crab and kale filling for crepes is delicious during crab season, while a lemony garbanzo bean soup can be enjoyed year-round.

The impetus behind England's book was to not only encourage people to experiment but also to support the farmers. Sometimes, the weather makes these ventures difficult. "There will be good years and bad years," England explains. "This past year was difficult for the dry beans but there was a lot of grains. In the book's introduction I tried to communicate that it's really important to cultivate our farmers so that they can cultivate our food. You have to take the long view."

If you can't find the dry beans you want this year, try something else, she says. Many of the heirloom beans are adaptable and interchangeable. "And the grains are the same way," England says. "If you don't happen to like barley then substitute wheat berries. If you like regular golden barley then try the black barley too."

Tiny Tavern, Big Makeover

Whiteaker landmark ups the charm and downs the urinal cake scent BY SILAS VALENTINO

Reviews on Yelp for the Tiny Tavern range from “Ever wonder what the gateway to hell looks like? Check the men’s bathroom” to “Smells like pee.” The Whiteaker’s classic dive bar suffered from an unfavorable reputation, but in recent months the oldest bar in Eugene has undergone an extraordinary transformation. With new management, the Tiny Tavern is serving exceptionally tasty bar food, offering live music and entertainment throughout the week and is slowly returning to the epicenter of Eugene’s bar scene.

The man behind the metamorphosis is Jevon Peck. “I’ve been helping turning around bars for the last couple of years,” Peck says. “I’ve been the guy people have been calling.” Similar to Jon Taffer from Spike TV’s Bar Rescue, minus the bug eyes and intense demeanor, Peck has been working singlehandedly on the Tiny Tavern restoration for the last few months. A chef by trade, Peck has been involved with both The Horsehead and The Old Pad. Tiny Tavern owner Jeff Malos asked Peck to change the bar around, and Peck enthusiastically heeded the call. “Sure I’ll do Tiny Tavern,” Peck says. “It’s my bar — I fucking love this place!”

Through Peck’s management, the Tiny Tavern has undergone a huge facelift. The booths, once held together by duct tape, have been replaced, and the place no longer reeks of urine. Peck says he’s making changes slowly and incrementally to stay true to the history of the bar.

Peck hopes to make the Tiny Tavern a reputable music venue for both local and traveling bands. “We have a ton of bands in this town,” Peck says. “Why haven’t they been served?”

Yet the Tiny Tavern’s most attractive revolution has been Peck’s work in the kitchen.

JEVON PECK IN TINY TAVERN'S TEENY KITCHEN

“I’ve had people come in and say ‘I’ve just had dinner at the Tiny Tavern and it’s the best meal in town,’” Peck says. Tiny’s, as it’s often called, offers a variety of specials ranging from Middle Eastern to Mexican to Chinese, which is Peck’s specialty. Located in the heart of the Whiteaker’s nightlife, Peck hopes to draw crowds in the future with a late night/early morning breakfast. “With all the breweries, I wanna be that place that basically sobers up all the drunks,” Peck says. He’ll be serving a Louisiana Southern-style breakfast filled with specially prepared grits that have a particular flare and spice. Though Tiny’s is only a tavern and not a full-scale restaurant, Peck doesn’t let this limit his ambitions with food. “I’ve personally wondered, ‘Why do bars have crappy food?’” Peck says. His most basic dishes, such as a bowl of macaroni and cheese, are expertly prepared with fresh salsa and Silk Road spices and filled with rich flavors. This is not your boxed mac ‘n’ cheese.

The Whiteaker is home to bustling bars and breweries, but Tiny’s is a unique and solid part of the scene. Peck thinks of Tiny’s as “the quintessential workingman’s bar, and just because it’s a workingman’s bar doesn’t mean it can’t be nice.” After receiving its first-ever liquor license (even though it’s been in business since 1937) the Tiny Tavern will be proudly serving those who think the best way to drink is through a shot. Peck will focus on high-end tequila and Irish whiskey and to complement the breakfast, a revitalizing bloody mary.

The resurrection of Tiny Tavern has been gradual and Peck is already mapping out plans for the future. “In two years’ time, I want to turn this place into a monster,” Peck says. With the restoration and complete reboot of the menu, the Tiny Tavern is en route to success. “The best new bar in town just so happens to be the oldest,” Peck says.

the Slice is Right

EW's incomplete guide to Eugene Za BY SARAH DECKER

If there's one thing that everyone's got an opinion on, it's pizza. Folks get downright adamant about the "best" in town. We decided to visit a few of the local favorites for some pizza and put together a little guide to who has what. One thing that is hard to get around is the fact that pizza is amazing. Even mediocre pizza is still pretty damn good. But what sets our entrants apart is in the details. Whether you're a sauce man or a crust kind of gal, no two slices are quite equal. Hopefully this small sampling guides you to a new favorite, reaffirms your love of your current favorite or pushes you out of your routine and has you trying something new.

Best Pizza to Eat While Watching a Show: Cozmic

The slice of pie at Cozmic was satisfying. It tasted more of mozzarella than anything else, but everything was fresh and fast. You set that slice next to a pint of local beer while enjoying one of the many amazing shows this venue brings to our town and you've got yourself a fantastic Friday night.

199 W. 8th Ave.

Best Crust: Sy's New York Pizza

Pizza crust has to be one of the hardest elements of the pie to get just right. Sy's has nailed it. While it is a thin crust, it maintains a perfectly chewy top and a delightfully crispy bottom. It holds up well to the toppings, which are generous. And the sauce is amazing: tangy and flavorful.

1211 Alder St.; 55 Silver Ln.

Best Happy Hour Pizza: Whirled Pies

From 3 to 6 pm Whirled Pies offers up something that is downright hard to beat: $1 slices. These slices are small, but if what you're seeking is a mid-afternoon snack or something to accompany a pint of local beer, this is the place. And the earthy flavors of their pizza remind you that you're dealing with fresh, healthy ingredients.

1123 Monroe St.

Best Toppings/Sauce/Crust Ratio: Mezza Luna

Mezza Luna piles its pillowy thin crust with the most ample amount of toppings. Their sauce is flavorful enough to hold its own against the rest of the pizza — making their slice a great choice for lunchtime, dinnertime, any time.

933 Pearl St.; 2776 Shadow View Dr.

Best Variety/Flavor Combinations: Sizzle Pie

While a slice of Sizzle Pie's pizza is offered up on a rather thin crust and with a less than abundant pile of toppings, they make up for it with the best flavor combinations available. These creations are imaginative yet simple and always delicious. Plus their location is hard to beat for late-night munchies.

910 Willamette St.

Best Pepperoni: Pegasus

To keep the playing field somewhat level, we ordered a pizza standard at all the spots: pepperoni. Everything about Pegasus' pizza is decidedly decent, but their pepperoni had the best flavor by far. Also, their crust had the most breadly quality, with less air and more substance than the others. Having been a campus staple for years, we have to admit that we're glad this local favorite made its way down to the south of town, giving those that live that direction a Pegasus to call their own.

790 E. 14th Ave.; 2864 Willamette St.; 4 Oakway Center.

Walk into Noisette Pastry Kitchen and you know you're somewhere special. Sun pours through the glass walls and, even in winter, the open kitchen with its bustle and chatter makes the place feel alive and exempt from cold-weather hibernation. Noisette's menu is visual, with names of dishes written on the parchment paper lining cases of sweet and savory pastries, sandwiches and salads.

Tobi Sovak and Michael Landsberg opened Noisette in 2012, at Broadway and Charnelton, right on the edge of the downtown revitalization. "It's good for us," Sovak says. "Down at the crossroads, it's a little frenetic and hectic. We're happy to be a little bit on the fringe of downtown. But I am hoping that the revitalization is going to spread. This block between us and the Bermuda Triangle is really no man's land right now."

With culinary pedigrees including Marché and King Estate, Sovak and Landsberg, partners in marriage as well as business, decided to do something different with Noisette: keep the price point low and have prepared food on a frequently changing menu. Sovak says she wanted to create something that reminded her of a European train station, minus the train.

"There is no way we can do what we're really trained to do — that sounds terrible, doesn't it?" she asks, laughing. "Our training is fine dining, and there isn't really a place for it in Eugene. There isn't enough business to support it. You can get to a certain level of 'fancy' and you can't surpass it."

Noisette does have delicious specials, but popularity got in the way of an ever-changing menu. Goat cheese biscuits, the lamb sandwich and a mozzarella and tomato sandwich are on the menu every day. Sovak says that when they tried mixing things up, customers complained that they missed their favorite items. "We wanted to rotate it, but they're very popular, so we decided just to keep them around forever — until they're unpopular," she says.

Keeping the price point low hasn't limited what Sovak and Landsberg can do. Sovak says that wine dinners, when private parties rent the space and even have music, let them make desserts like frozen nougat and dishes like fresh prawn poached in butter and vanilla, tossed in fennel pollen and served on a salad with greens and roasted vegetables. Sovak bakes the bread and pastries, while Landsberg is in charge of the savory side.

Special orders for pies and pastries kept Noisette hopping through the holidays, though Sovak says the December snow storm was rough for all the downtown businesses. She's already gearing up for Valentine's Day special orders and planning heart-shaped menu items and possibly candy. "I feel like I'm just catching my breath after the holidays," she says. "It's a little bit quieter, but not that much."

After Valentine's Day, Noisette will host one of the stops for the Feb. 22 Brides on Broadway, an event that pairs all sorts of wedding vendors. "It doesn't have to be just for brides and weddings," Sovak adds. "It can be for anybody planning a party."

The future's looking bright for Noisette, too. Sovak says that even with a busy February on the horizon, she's dreaming of citrus and spring.

Noisette Pastry Kitchen is located at 200 W. Broadway, 654-5257, noisettepk.com. Hours are 8 am to 7 pm Monday through Saturday.

Chicken Molé Soup FROM SOUP NATION

Soup Nation specializes in soups, but also has amazing sandwiches and salads. Chef Mark Stern began his soup crusade in 1997 with a food cart called Carte Blanche Soup Carte. This was well before the era of the food cart craze, and his cart was successful enough that it is still dishing up soup, bread and salad in front of the PLC building on the UO campus.

Now that he's moved into a restaurant, he's able to serve more than 80 soup varieties all year round. Stern makes all Soup Nation soups in-house, with no MSG, packaged stock bases or preservatives. He smokes his own meats in-house and roasts his own veggies for salads and sandwiches. Breads are baked fresh each morning, as are all of the baked sweets and savory items. As satisfying as soup is, Soup Nation also has locally roasted, organic drip coffee and espresso and an all-Oregon handcrafted beer selection. — Vanessa Salvia

For the chicken:

1 whole fryer chicken
water to cover
1 carrot, rough chop
2 ribs celery, rough chop
1 large yellow onion, rough chop
3 bay leaves
4 cloves garlic

For the ground items:

1/2 cup chicken fat or olive oil
4 corn tortillas, cut into small pieces
1/2 cup walnuts
1/2 cup sesame seeds
1 1/2 cups raisins or currants

For the sauté:

3 tbsp olive oil
1 large yellow onion, small dice
1 tbsp salt
4 cloves garlic, minced
2 tsp ground cumin
2 tsp oregano
1/2 tsp cinnamon

For the liquids:

16 ounces crushed tomatillo chicken stock to cover
1/2 cup chile puree (Reconstituted mix of 5 to 7 types: guajillo, ancho, New Mexican, de arbol, pasilla, California or others.)
1 cup chile water
1/4 cup coffee, strong brewed

For the finishing touches:

2 tbsp cilantro, minced
2 cups corn
Juice of 1 fresh lime

Cut chicken into pieces. Add it and the vegetable accompaniments to a stockpot. Bring to a boil. Reduce to simmer until the chicken is done. Pull out the chicken. Pick the bones off meat. Add bones back in and reduce the stock, finally straining to make stock.

Sauté the ground items in olive oil or chicken fat until well toasted. Whirl in food processor until it becomes a paste. Reserve.

Reconstitute chiles for puree, reserving 1 cup of the chile water. Brew coffee. Reserve.

In another larger stock pot, cook the sautéed items until the onions are translucent. Add the ground items. Cook 5 minutes to integrate. Add liquids and enough stock to cover. Bring to simmer.

Add poached chicken and finishing touches items. Adjust with more chiles and salt as needed.

Enchiladas Your Way

FROM SWEET CREEK FOODS

Sweet Creek Foods is a small, certified-organic cannery located in Elmira. Everything it uses is organic and locally sourced. Sweet Creek makes its own pickles and pickled items such as beets and relishes, canned Oregon albacore tuna, enchilada sauces and fruit spreads (the FDA doesn't allow a food producer to call their fruit a "jam" unless it contains more than a certain amount of sugar). In addition, Sweet Creek co-packs for other farms, large and small. "A lot of times farmers will have extra tomatoes or berries and they can come to us and we do small-batch canning," says manager Zach Fuller. "It's great for farms and independent people who want to start a business."

Fuller eats a mostly gluten-free diet and loves the enchilada sauces because they are always gluten-free and come in five different flavors: hot, mild, medium, green and chipotle, whatever he's in the mood for. "Enchiladas are easy to make and great for parties and potlucks," Fuller says. "Any and all ingredients can be subject to your own personal creative taste and made to cater to vegetarian, vegan and gluten-free diets." Fuller says he makes a couple of pans of enchiladas and freezes them for easy eating on busy nights. "Enchiladas are an easy and quick-to-make dish that feeds the masses and experimenting is encouraged!" he says. "Hope you folks enjoy these enchiladas as much as we do." — Vanessa Salvia

Serves 4 to 6

For the filling:

1 lb chicken, beef, fish or chopped veggies of choice
1 tsp ground cumin
2 tsp chili powder, or to taste

1/2 tsp salt, or to taste
1/4 cup chopped yellow onion
2 tsp garlic powder or minced garlic
1 cup chopped tomatoes
1 can beans of choice

Other ingredients:

Cooking oil
1 pack of 12 corn tortillas for gluten-free, or flour if desired
1 16-ounce jar of Sweet Creek Foods red or green enchilada sauce
3 cups shredded cheddar cheese
1/4 cup diced olives (if desired)
1/4 cup minced cilantro (if desired, highly recommended)
sour cream for topping (if desired)

Add 1 tablespoon cooking oil to large frying pan and begin to preheat. Add meat of choice or veggies to pan. While cooking, add in beans, onion, tomatoes, garlic, chili and cumin powder. Salt mixture to taste. Cook off the liquid from the tomatoes or drain if necessary. Set mixture aside.

Using a frying pan and a pot lid for the top, heat the tortillas until soft and pliable. Cover the bottom of a 9x13-inch baking pan with 3 to 4 tablespoons of the Sweet Creek Foods red or green enchilada sauce.

Fill and roll each tortilla with the desired amount of filling. Place rolled enchiladas side by side in the bottom of the prepared pan. Evenly pour the remainder of the sauce over the entire pan. Smother enchiladas with cheese.

Moroccan Merguez Sausage, Swiss Chard and Lentils

FROM CHEVIOT HILL SHEEP FARM

Nearly every country has its own form of sausage, and merguez is made in the Moroccan tradition, generously spiced with cumin, smoked paprika and garlic. In Morocco, merguez is usually eaten grilled or with couscous, but lentils are an excellent accompaniment, as in this recipe provided by Cheviot Hill Sheep Farm, located in Pleasant Hill. Its sausages have sweeter, warming spices such as fennel and cinnamon and are not spicy. Owner Gail Gould raises chef's quality grass-fed Cheviot lamb on organic pastures and makes specialty lamb sausages made with local organic ingredients and no sugar or gluten.

Pork casings are commonly used for sausages, but that defeats the purpose for people who don't eat pork but do enjoy sausages. Lamb casings are thinner in diameter. "We pack our sausages only in lamb casing," Gould says. "No pork casing, ever." Cheviot Hill Sheep Farm sells merguez and smoked merguez, all-lamb Mexican-style chorizo and quince and honey low-salt sausage at Kiva Grocery and Market of Choice in Eugene, the Marketplace@Sprout! on Fridays in Springfield, Dexter Lake Farmer's Market and Lane County Farmers Market in Eugene. The sausages and other seasonal products from the farm, such as duck eggs, are also available on the Eugene Local Foods website. "This recipe is also delicious with Cheviot Hill Sheep Farm smoked merguez," Gould says. "Simply omit the poaching as the smoked sausages are already fully cooked." — Vanessa Salvia

2 links Cheviot Hill Sheep Farm merguez sausage
1 bunch Swiss chard (about 3/4 pound)
2/3 cup green lentils
2 cups chicken stock, vegetable stock or water
Salt and pepper
2 or 3 minced cloves of garlic
1 sprig (2 inches long) fresh rosemary, minced

In a pot over medium heat, cook the lentils for 20 to 25 minutes with the stock, a bit of salt and pepper and the minced rosemary.

Meanwhile, separate the chard stems from the leaves. Cut the leaves into strips and dice the stems. Boil the stems for 5 minutes, then add the leaves and boil for another 3 minutes. Drain.

Poach the sausage for 7 to 8 minutes. Remove the sausages from the water, slice into rounds and cook the rounds in a skillet over medium high heat until crispy on both sides (about 10 minutes total). Add minced garlic when the sausages are almost crispy. Add the chard, stir to heat and serve over the lentils.

Black Truffle Smoked Linguine with Clams, Sorrel, White Wine, Garlic and Truffle Butter

FROM GRIT

In the few short months that Grit has been operating out of the historic Shamrock building in Eugene's Whiteaker neighborhood, it's already scored lots of attention. Chef and owner Ashley Hawkins is committed to buying only local and in-season food. At Grit, Hawkins offers a fixed four-course dinner for $35. Her menus change weekly. This recipe was chosen to celebrate Oregon truffle season, but it could be altered to fit any season.

"For early this spring I would substitute truffles with morel mushrooms and sorrel with stinging nettles," Hawkins says. With clam season on the way out, this dish gives you one last go, she adds. "And if you are feeling like a really hardy warming dish, add some homemade sausage like we do sometimes!" — Vanessa Salvia

For linguine:

1/3 cup plus 1 tbsp smoked durum flour
1 1/2 cups 00 flour (or all-purpose flour)

1/2 tsp kosher salt
2 eggs
2 tsp water or more as needed
2 tbsp truffle paste
1 tbsp whole milk

For clams:

2 tbsp kosher salt, plus extra
1 1/2 lbs Manila clams
Extra virgin olive oil
2 garlic cloves, sliced
1/4 tsp dried red pepper flakes
1/3 cup white wine
1/2 cup of sorrel chiffonade

For truffle butter:

1 lb butter
Airtight container
1 to 2 ounces fresh truffles

To make the truffle butter: Simply place truffles in airtight container when you get them with the butter (unwrapped) and the truffle will infuse the butter with its aroma.

To make the truffle paste: Thinly slice black truffle on a mandoline, with a peeler or by hand. If using a food processor, place truffles in with a three-finger pinch of kosher salt. Add olive oil (2 tablespoons plus more if needed) and blend until truffles are as smooth as possible (note: they will still be a bit grainy, but this adds a lovely texture and fleck to the dough). This can also be made with a mortar and pestle or even the back of a spoon in a shallow bowl.

To make the linguine: In a stand mixer with the paddle attachment, mix together the smoked durum flour with the 00 flour (or all-purpose flour) and salt. In a bowl, whisk together the eggs, water, truffle paste and milk. With the mixer running on low speed, drizzle in the egg mixture.

Mix dough for 2 to 3 minutes. If it still looks very dry, as if it won't stick together at all, add more water a 1/2 teaspoon at a time until dough is still on the dry side but begins to form small clumps.

Turn dough onto the counter and knead by hand for several minutes; it will feel dry and firm. Flatten the dough into a flat rectangle, wrap in plastic wrap and leave on the counter for 30 minutes to soften and hydrate. Roll out the dough with an electric pasta roller or a hand-crank model. Divide dough into 3 or 4 pieces. Set the rollers on the widest setting. Guide dough through the rollers. Fold dough in overlapping thirds (like a letter) and pass through again. Repeat a couple of times. Switch to the next thinnest setting and guide dough through twice. Repeat until you have passed the dough through the second-thinnest setting.

Replace dough rollers with the fettuccini attachment and run dough through it to create long strands. You may also hand cut them if you don't have any attachments. Shake the noodles loose, then place them on a lightly floured baking sheet and keep on the counter.

To smoke the flour: Pile soaked wood chips (like cherry or apple wood) on one end of a pan. About 1/2 cup of wood chips will do. Cover a fitted perforated pan or a wire rack with foil. Pour flour on the side of the pan opposite the wood chips and cover the pan with foil or the smoker lid. Put pan over a pair of front and back burners with the food whips in the front. Turn ventilation fan on and turn front burner to medium. Allow chips to smoke for a few minutes, then turn burner to low and smoke for 20 minutes. Remove from heat and cool. The flour will be chalky and will have darkened. If it's lumpy, sift it.

In a large sauté pan that has a fitted lid, heat truffle butter over medium heat. Add most of the garlic slices and sweat until softened, about 1 minute. Sprinkle in the red pepper flakes, add the clams and season with salt. Toss pan once or twice, and then pour in the wine and cover. Cook for 2 to 4 minutes or until the clams have opened. Uncover, remove from heat and keep warm. Keep clam liquid for finishing pasta.

Bring pot back to a boil and stir in the pasta. Cook until al dente, 3 to 4 minutes. Drain, saving and setting aside about 1/2 cup of the cooking water. Return pasta to the same pot. Pour in clams and some of the clam liquid and bring to a simmer. Add sorrel chiffonade. Simmer another minute, then taste, adding more salt if needed, and a little of the reserved pasta cooking water if the sauce is too thick. Divide among plates and garnish with more sorrel. Eat with friends and laugh a lot!
